The Saiva section of Hinduism fancied the Devadasi custom more than the others.

The 'Shiva Purana' lays down that when Siva temples are built and endowments made for the conduct of the daily rituals, the gift of damsels well versed in dance and song should also be made to the temple.

History records the fact when in the 9th century A.D. Raja Raja Chola built the Brahadeesvara temple in Tanjore he gifted four hundred Devadasis to the temple.
